

Fact Sheet:

Criminal Justice Parolee Services Network

BACKGROUND

There are nine Parolee Services Networks in California funded by the California Department of Corrections (CDC). They provide community treatment and recovery services to parolees in 17 counties.

- Program design is for 180 days of treatment.
- Programs are administered jointly by CDC and the California Department of Alcohol and Drug Programs (ADP) through an Interagency Agreement.
- The total local assistance funds for the networks in Fiscal Year (FY) 2002-03 are $10.7 million.
- ADP allocates funds to the 17 participating counties through each county's Negotiated Net Amount Contract.

PROGRAM OBJECTIVES

- Place parolees in appropriate alcohol and other drug treatment and recovery programs, either immediately upon release from custody or from the community parole system.
- Improve parole outcomes as evidenced by fewer drug-related parole revocations and new violations.
- Reduce State General Fund costs for incarceration and parole supervision.
